the most enlightened
today may yet expect.

unavoidable vested interests?
(eg. due to corruption, unearned income, collective broad obstruction of progress)

wait, work, then
live a decent life (hopefully)

consistent insistence, patience, diligence, investment?

not enough good people to waste?

count one more stupid useless hateful idea added to a hate filled world

Irrationality and cowardice, when taken to the abandonment of the responsibilities that an individual has implicitly agreed to in their activities, such as is the case with inciting or acting on intolerance of others, is, if anything is, the most unacceptable crime. Preventing all persons from living rationally within any context is preventing persons from living life - also known as contrary to the 'pursuit of happiness'.

What you say and do to others is the same as driving on a public road. Skill, not compromised by unreasonably bad attitude, is strictly required. Consequences whether imposing educational choices, presenting false choices, making poor hiring decisions, or doing bad science - are the same.

Lives are ruined by imposed irrationality and cowardice, the same as drunk driving.
